Dear Jim:

Seems as if I have not had the best of luck when I try to phone you at night for I always seem to hit upon times when you are not at home.

Since I am leaving for Detroit tomorrow, I will drop you a line in response to your recent note concerning a secret order that was effectuated sometime during the 11th or 12th century. The only thing I can think of in connection with that is the work done by Hermes at the time of the pyramids out of which came the Masonic Order.

I think in history it was well established that all of the various lodges of the Masonic Order, all of which I have had, were originated at that particular time. However, the Masonic order as such was only a small part of what had been developed at that time. It seems as if all of the wisdom societies that have come into existence at one time or another seemingly were parts of that original secret order. Of course, I had no input whether or not I was identified with any of that or whether or not it was an alternate situation which you ultimately will ferret out.

With abundant light, I am

Sincerely yours,

John E. Fetzer
